EXCHANGE CLUB JOY RIDE DUE

To Unite With Other Cities for Trip to Lebec

TO START ON JAN. 20

Lebec Booster Presses Invitation on the Members

A large number of the members of the Glendale Exchange club will join with the Exchange club members from Los Angeles, Pasadena and Hollywood in a "joy ride" to Lebec hotel, which is situated about 75 miles north of Glendale on the Ridge route. The party will make the trip on Saturday afternoon, January 20, and will remain all Saturday night at Lebec, returning to Glendale Sunday afternoon.

As a forerunner of this trip, Mr. Curry, who put Yosemite on the map, addressed the Exchange club Wednesday noon.

"I believe that next to good roads the most important thing to the motorists of this country is good highway hotels," said Mr. Curry. "We are determined to make of Lebec one of the finest highway hotels in California. It is ideally located for a feature of this kind. The site of Lebec is 4,000 feet above sea level. It is located on the hills and among the trees. It is comparatively cool at Lebec practically the year around which fact, combined with its other natural advantages, makes it one of the most wonderful locations for a highway hotel."

"I hope to be able to entertain the Exchange club of Glendale en masse a week from next Saturday night. We are making elaborate preparations for that affair and hope to make it one that will long be remembered by all those who attend. It is a ride of about three and a half hours from Glendale, every foot of which is picturesque and attractive.

"We would like to know in advance just how many we will have to prepare for. We want you all to come. I can assure you that nothing will be too good for you on that trip."

RICHARDSON D. WHITE URGES COMMUNITY SERVICE BEFORE FEDERATED P. T. A.

Declares 90 Per Cent of the Citizens Are Not Organized in Any of the Existing Bodies in the City and Should Be Brought Together

DISCUSSES FINANCING OF THE WORK

Tells of Support Already Pledged and Promised by City, Board of Education and Declares Only $3000 More Required to Bring Recreation Here

The raising of money to finance its own budget and that of Glendale Community Service, whose representatives addressed it, was the chief theme of the meeting of the Glendale Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations, held at the high school Wednesday afternoon, with Mrs. E. B. Moore, head of the organization, presiding.

The report of Mrs. Percy Priaux, treasurer, of a bank balance of but $15.82 and some bills unpaid, made clear the necessity of action to replenish the exchequer. Suggestions were made by Mrs. L. T. Rowley, chairman of finance, by Mrs. Dotson and others, the one finding greatest favor being a big bazaar. This was incorporated in a vote to give such an affair to which each association would contribute a booth and a program number for the purpose of raising $300 for the federation, any excess over and above that sum to be divided among the associations participating. Mrs. Rowley was instructed to summon the chairman of finance to a conference to arrange for a bazaar to be given about St. Valentine's time.

The other matter of finance was brought to the attention of the association by Superintendent Richardson D. White in connection with Community Service, the aims of which he explained, pointing out the great help which it can give to many who need recreation and opportunity for making acquaintances. Said Mr. White: "I have been informed that Glendale is over organized, that it does not need an organization. In a sense that is correct. When we study the matter we find it is over organized in little circles, but I venture the assertion that 90 per cent of the present population do not belong to any of those little circles and are not organized at all. The great unorganized population needs something to bind it together, something non-political and non-sectarian. Our city is almost three times as large as it was in 1917 and community service can and will interest the newcomers."

"Community Service will provide for athletic activities, music and the drama. The latest thing it is contemplating here is a community play on a big scale staged in an out of door setting in the Verdugo canyon, put on by the community. If successful the first year, as it is almost certain to be, it will become an annual event and put Glendale more definitely on the map than anything else it could do.

"But that is the smallest part. If it gets us all working together on one scheme without jealousy, it will have accomplished a wonderful thing for Glendale.

"I have come to tell you about the financing of community service. It is going to be financed in several ways, first by appropriations which members of the city council have indicated a willingness to make through the park and recreation department. The board of education will do the same thing and has already agreed to give $1000 for summer playgrounds on a larger scale than heretofore and with an expert community service director. He will be here in thirty days and be a permanent resident and plan all these big programs of recreation.

"There will still be $3000 to be raised in other ways. As one of the ways we are planning to give in the near future a $25 a plate dinner, the proceeds of which will go to the community service fund. We believe we can find 100 people in Glendale who are public spirited enough to take a ticket for such a dinner as that will be.

"As a means of securing an additional $1000 and reaching those in all parts of the city who would be glad to contribute small sums we thought of asking the P. T. A. federation, which reaches all classes and sections and is non-sectarian and non-political, to help us to secure in each association two teams who would compete against each other in raising these subscriptions."

Don Orput, the representative of National Community Service Incorporated, supplemented Mr. White's proposition with additional explanations, and Mr. White added: "Experience has shown that there has never been any trouble in securing all the money needed for community service after the first year, and the tendency has been to make it more and more a municipal proposition."

Mr. White expressed the conviction that the growth Glendale is making will soon necessitate such

C. C. Miller, represented by Attorney G. H. King, and Mrs. Mary C. Beauchamp, represented by Attorney McBryde, are trying to settle before a jury in Judge Lowe's court at 10 o'clock this morning, a dispute which grew out of an automobile accident in which cars driven by Harlan Miller, son of Mr. Miller, and Wayne Beauchamp, son of Mrs. Beauchamp, were considerably damaged.

On April 23, 1922, it appears, the machines driven by the boys came together.

Mr. Miller is suing Mrs. Beauchamp for $58.20 to cover repairs on his machine, $100 for permanent damage and $50 for the five days the car was in the shop. A cross complaint has been filed by Mrs. Beauchamp asking for $231 damages and costs.

$25 BANQUET PLANNED TO SECURE FUNDS TO SUPPORT COMMUNITY SERVICE HERE

Delegates of Luncheon Clubs Hold Meeting to Organize Big Gathering to Finance the Community Service Work in Glendale on January 25

TO BE MADE "CITY OF NEIGHBORS"

Exchange, Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs Move Together to Put Over Promotion and Eliminate Idea of House-to-House Canvass for Support

If you are one of the many residents of Glendale who would like to see this community a "City of Neighbors" in addition to a "City of Homes," you will have an opportunity of contributing very substantially in making possible a Community Service program for Glendale, as the result of a meeting Wednesday of local club committees.

A committee from the three luncheon clubs, Exchange, Kiwanis and Rotary, which conferred recently with the executive board of Glendale Community Service and was authorized to make plans for raising the remainder of the budget for this work in Glendale, met Wednesday at the office of Dr. C. L. Marlenee. It was determined to make arrangements to put over a $25 dinner, $1 extra to admit escort or lady. The dinner will be set for Thursday, January 25. This plan was decided on in order to eliminate a house-to-house canvass for funds to make up the remainder of the Glendale Community Service budget.

The next business taken up at yesterday's meeting was to divide up the organizations of Glendale among the three luncheon clubs, so that each club will be responsible for securing one-third of the organizations to enter into the campaign. Every club in the city is invited to participate. It is planned to raise $3000 at the dinner.

George B. Karr, a member of the committee from the three clubs, appeared at the Exchange club meeting yesterday and presented the campaign plans, after which they chose the following team: Captain D. Ripley Jackson, W. B. Kelly, W. C. Waring, J. Howarth and Ed. Radke.

A meeting of all of the campaign teams which will have been appointed by that time will meet Tuesday noon for luncheon at the Broadway Inn.

Additional information regarding the campaign may be secured from George B. Karr, Lyman Clark, Dr. Marlenee or V. M. Hollister. See that your organization appoints a team and has an active part in the campaign.

The possibility of bringing the entire club together through Community Service was most effectively demonstrated at Glendale's first Community Christmas celebration, held at the high school grounds recently. The program for Glendale also includes social and physical recreation, drama and music activities.

CONGREGATIONAL MEMBERSHIP EAT IN NEW CHURCH

300 Guests Served at Annual Dinner; Officers Elected

Wednesday was a happy day for members of the Congregational Church who occupied for the first time the basement of their new church on Central and Wilson, where the annual church dinner was served at 6 o'clock to nearly 300 guests.

All the new kitchen equipment, bought in Glendale, was used, the $200 worth of new dishes, the new steam table, stove and coffee percolator, and the tables were beautifully decorated with flowers and greenery.

It was a chicken pie dinner and the contented guests kept 25 waiters very busy. When the last course had been served annual reports were submitted by the pastor, Rev. C. M. Calderwood, the officers of the church and committee chairmen, all of which were highly satisfactory, particularly the report of the building committee. A large increase in membership was shown when the church is dedicated the latter part of February, and the outlook was most cheering.

The nominating committee reported a list of candidates to fill offices for the coming year who were unanimously elected as follows: Clerk—Mrs. H. W. Yarrick to succeed herself. Treasurer—Miss Grace Hooker. Auditor—Peter Hanson. Deacon—A. E. Angier. Deaconess—Mrs. Agnes Welsh. Trustees—E. D. Yard, H. W. Yarrick, A. N. Green, R. G. Boyles, Philip Buettner.

Delegates to represent the church at conventions—Mrs. Minnie Patterson and Mrs. George Colson; alternates, Mrs. R. E. Wolcott and Mrs. A. H. Chappell. Chairman of missionary department—Mrs. H. G. Schulte. Chairman of social service—Mrs. Hattie B. Buettner. Chairman of religious education—W. L. Jencks.

Church services will from this time forward be held in the basement until the new auditorium is ready for use. The Women's Auxiliary is meeting in the new church today and will make plans for a series of dinners to raise money for the building fund.

PHYSICAL WORK FOR NEW CLASS IS HI PROBLEM

Students Coming Into School in Mid-winter; Complicates Situation

One of the big problems confronting Principal Moyse and the coaches of Glendale high is how to arrange programs for physical work which will provide for students who will be coming in at the opening of the mid-year term. At the present time the school is exceeding the schedule required by law and giving training five days a week, but classes are now too large for full efficiency and it looks as though the schedule would have to be cut down to the maximum requirement of the state, thus curtailing some of the physical training which is considered so important to the health of pupils.

JAPAN INVESTS IN MANCHURIA HEAVILY

By RAY G. MARSHALL
United Press Staff Correspondent
PEKING (By Mail).—The Japanese owned South Manchuria railway zone from Dairen to Changchun is going to experience a building boom in the spring and the activity is expected to go beyond the present bounds of Japanese influence and enter Harbin itself.

The South Manchurian railway has already arranged to spend 25,000,000 yen for new structures next year. New railway buildings, station improvements, hospitals, technical schools and experiment stations will be included in the program. This amount is entirely aside from the general program of railway improvements and extensions.

Part of the building fund will be used to erect a hotel in Harbin, this to cost 1,800,000 yen; and a hospital. The hospital is needed for the 5000 Japanese residents of the city.

While this program is under way, the South Manchuria proposes to organize a new bank to handle the various Japanese enterprises in Manchuria.

All of which is a pretty good indication that the Tokyo foreign office meant what it said when it announced that Japan had no intention of getting out of the Liaotung leased territory, or the railroad zone next year.

ROBINSON SHOP CLEARANCE IS ANNOUNCED

Robinson's Men's Shop has outgrown the present quarters and within the next few weeks will move to a new brick building which is being erected especially for Mr. Robinson just north of his present store. Work is well under way on the new building and it will be rushed to completion.

To save moving the goods and to demonstrate that he is able to put on a real clearance sale Mr. Robinson says he will move just as little of his present large stock as possible and is making prices that are proving a great attraction to economical buyers. He has had a continual run of business every day since starting the sale, which will continue until he is ready to move. Some exceptionally low prices are being made on high grade men's and boys' clothing and men's furnishings. In his new quarters Mr. Robinson will carry a much larger stock, and be able to give the public better service in every way. Dependable goods at right prices has brought to Mr. Robinson a big business.

Advertising Shortens the Road to Success

Do you doubt that a new hatter could spring up in New York and, with honest hats and brilliant advertising, in five years take its place abreast of the leaders of fifty years? It has been done.

Do you doubt that a new thought could arise in pencils, and, in two years, backed by good advertising, make a place for the pencil on the desks of the nation? That, too, has been done.

Do you doubt that a New York department store, in a bad year, could, largely through the improvement in its advertising, attract 110,000 new customers to its shop? That was done, last year.

A fine old business may consider advertising as a protection for today and insurance for tomorrow but to the young growing business it is a pair of seven league boots, which bring fame, friends and volume, years before their normal advent.

HEALTH COMES FIRST

OF ALL THINGS
in your home, from cellar to roof, what is the most important to convenience and health?

Stop and think—

The furniture, rugs, drapes, paintings? The hardwood floors, interior finish, the decorating?

No, none of these.

It is the plumbing.

Plumbing safeguards the health of the entire household. It is as essential to have GOOD plumbing as it is to carry life or fire insurance. Health officials will vouch for this;
statistics prove it.Therefore give to the selection of plumbing as great care as is given to the selection of the furnishings and interior decorations of your home.

Attend to it personally.

Do not depend upon a middleman or a fly-by-night contractor who is thinking more of his discounts or commissions than of your comfort and health.Certified plumbing work and materials may be obtained by selecting members of the Sanitary Development League.
They are pledged to maintain the highest ideals and standards of the industry—to deal squarely.They prize their reputations more highly than they do your dollars.SANITARY DEVELOPMENT LEAGUE OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA
321 H. W. Hellman Building Los Angeles, Cal.EXCHANGE CLUB
ATTACKS WATER METER CHARGESMembers Declare Cost of Connection is ExorbitantThat the cost of water meter connections in Glendale is exorbitant and that something should be done at once to secure a reduction in the cost of connecting new homes to the water mains was a decision reached at the meeting of the Glendale Exchange club, Wednesday noon."The cost of $30 for making a meter connection, such as is charged in this city, is outrageous," said W. B. Kelly. "I know from absolute experience that this charge is responsible for a great many people refusing to locate and build in Glendale.""There are other cities adjacent to Glendale where the cost of this service is but $16. I suggest that the club take up this matter and see what can be done toward securing a reduction in these rates."It was decided to refer this matter to the civic committee of the club, which could work in conjunction with the similar committee of the other civic organizations of the city.In connection with water meters it was suggested by James Howarth that the club take up the matter of having extensions laid from the water mains to the park-ways before each home wherever water pipes are laid, before the street is surfaced, this being to eliminate the necessity of digging up the street each time it is desired to make a meter connection."This practice of cutting up the street each time a meter connection is made," said Mr. Howarth,
"results in the streets being made very uneven and hard on motorists and automobiles. Other cities have a law demanding that these extensions to the parkways be made when the mains are put in, and there is no reason why Glendale should not have a similar law.""While we are on the subject of civic improvements," said Mr. Mc-Connell of the Builders' Supply company, "why not take up the matter of street signs. We have no adequate system of signing our streets. The merchants of this city are losing money every day by having to hunt for the streets of Glendale."In the matter of forming a round table of the presidents of the various civic organizations in Glendale in order that all may be working along similar lines the various members of the club spoke favorably toward such a move. This presidents' organization, it is understood, will meet frequently and discuss the various matters of interest to the city. President Jackson stated that he felt gratified that the club was favorable to this move.A committee consisting of D. Ripley Jackson, W. B. Kelly, W. C.
Waring, E. N. Radke and Dr. Mar-lenee was appointed to work with committees from other civic organizations of the city in the coming drive for funds for community service.A talk on community service was given by Mr. Karr of the Rotary club, who was present as a guest of the day. He told what the community service is and what it is striving to do."A sum of $6,500 is needed for the carrying on of this community service work during 1923," said Mr.
Kelly, "and it is desired to raise about $2,500 by popular subscription. A dinner will be held about January 25, the tickets for which will be $25. Those present will be given $1 worth of eats and the

ANCE OF SOLE LEATHERThe United States bureau of standards has completed service tests on fourteen pairs of soles, one sole of each pair being the plain leather, while the other sole was treated by a special process for increasing wear resistance.The process consists of covering the entire surface of the soles with stitches which are looped and locked near the center of the sole. The wood fibre thread used is thoroughly saturated with wax.The results of these tests show that leather so treated wears about 25 per cent longer per unit of thickness than untreated leather, the increase in wear appearing to be proportional to the amount of fibre material added to the leather.

ATTRACTIVE HEADDRESSES

No evening costume is complete without a headdress of some sort. A particularly attractive one consists of a narrow band of pearl beads above which is an inch-wide frill of silver lace. Slightly more expensive and very lovely is another bandeau of pearls with round pearl ornaments set with brilliant at each side.

WHEN YOU SUGGEST

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.
(Copyright, 1923, by The Associated Newspapers)Emil Coue, much discussed exponent of the art of healing by suggestion, rightly emphasizes the importance of relaxing mentally and physically whenever one gives one's self suggestions looking to improvement in health, the gaining of peace of mind, etc. In more detail one of Coue's disciples, C. Harry Brooks, explains why relaxing is a real aid to successful self-suggestion."If," notes Brooks, "we assume a comfortable posture, relax our muscles and close our eyes we fall naturally into a state of semi-consciousness akin to that of day-dreaming. If now we introduce into the mind any desired idea, it is freed from the inhibiting associations of daily life, associates itself by similarity and attracts emotions of the same quality as its own charge. The Unconscious is thus caused to accept it and inevitably it is turned into auto-suggestion.""Every time we repeat this process the associative power of the idea is increased, its emotional value grows greater and the auto-suggestion resulting from it is more powerful.""By this means we can induce the Unconscious to accept an idea, the normal associations of which are contrary and unfavorable. The person with a disease-soaked mind can gradually implant ideas of health, filling his Unconscious daily with healing thoughts. The instrument we use is the imagination, and the condition essential to success is that the conscious mind shall be lulled to rest."Long before Coue's time, it should be added, the relationship between a state of relaxation and the effective giving of suggestions was recognized by the pioneers of mental medicine. But even today the general public—or that section of it endeavoring to benefit by self-suggestion—too commonly fails to relax when suggesting. As a consequence many benefit from suggestion so little that they soon abandon it.Take, for example, a person troubled by difficulty in sleeping. Learning that suggestion has helped people similarly troubled, he determines to make trial of it.Accordingly, as soon as he has gone to bed he starts saying to himself, "I am going to sleep, I am going to sleep," insistently, vehemently. But he says it with wide-staring eyes, with his whole body in a state of tension, perhaps even with an uneasy tossing from side to side.Under such a condition he cannot possibly sleep.
And the more imperatively he asserts "I am going to sleep," summoning his will to reinforce the assertion, the less likely is sleep to come to him. It is a psychological commonplace that to try to sleep is the worst of all ways to woo sleep.Let the ardent self-suggester abandon his feverish effort to compel sleep, let him close his eyes, quiet down, and drowsily murmur, "I am going to sleep, I am going to sleep." A very different result will then follow. Actually he will sleep, possibly in a few minutes.Not only this, but the next time he makes use of self-suggestion as an aid to sleep he will find it still more efficacious. So that the time may come when, an adept in relaxation, it needs but a few whisperings of "I am going to sleep" to make the event bear out the whispering.The same holds good of self-suggestion generally.
As Coue teaches, the more one can relax when suggesting anything to one's self, the greater the likelihood of the suggestion "taking."

OUT OF THE SQUABBLE

Having in mind the confused conditions of Europe, an editor asks: "Is it not well to be outside of the squabble?"

That is one view, of course, a superficial view, and easy to take. Its acceptance in a spirit of gladness is the expression of intellectual laziness. The intimation it seeks to convey is made without the preliminary process of thought that tends to give value to a statement, direct or obscure.

To desire to be a part of the imbroglia overseas would be a fallacy so gross that no defense could be made for it. There is no sentiment to sustain it. The situation is deplorable. There is a threat of disaster whatever the way in which the inimical forces may expend their fury, or if the fury be permitted to die down.

But the fact is worth considering that had the United States not withdrawn so completely and abruptly from the affairs of Europe, the status that has been created probably never could have come into being. This country was in a position to be the great stabilizing agency, its influence directing the affairs of civilization into the paths of justice and peace. The responsibility was thrust towards it. The United States, swayed by the clamor for isolation, the policy of utmost selfishness, declined the responsibility. Immediately Europe was as a great engine running wild. It had lost the factor that might have saved it; might have saved it, too, without the present venture to the brink of destruction.

The lost opportunity never may come again. To mix actively in the squabble now, would be likely to extend it and promote its virulence. It may be good to be outside, but infinitely better, with high principle and courage, to have prevented the squabble.

RELIGION IN RUSSIA

In Russia Christmas has just been celebrated according to the Georgian calendar. Millions of the peasants treated the occasion with reverence, as has been their wont. Russians as a mass are deeply religious. Their faith is almost instinctive. So devoted have they been for generations to the teachings of the church that they have ignored the fact that the sectarian organization had been but a part of the political machinery of the czar, and a corrupt and brutal part, at that. The essence of religion, its promise and hope, they could grasp. In the day that the official church has been swept away, they cling to that which the church was supposed to represent. Truth to tell, it is about all they have to which to cling.

The soviets had planned a shocking anti-religious festival, but the program was not fully carried out. It was carried out sufficiently, however, to demonstrate the moral degradation of the bolsheviks. That they should be opposed to the formal church, which had been an agency of oppression, is not strange. But to make a mock of the human tendency to believe in and to worship God, and to turn the date usually given measurably to such worship, in ribald and indecent orgies, was carrying the spirit of hatred to the point in which it becomes repugnant to the intelligence.

Herein lies a weakness of the soviet regime. The millions whom it must win over in order to be a permanency, are essentially and deeply religious. They not only accept God, but the doctrine of salvation is dear to them. So far as they are concerned, the bawlings of rampant haters of all that is esteemed sacred or divine, never will win them.

STANDING ROOM ONLY

A Los Angeles church advertised that it would show a moving picture at the evening service. The result was that the house contained three times the ordinary number, and was crowded to the doors. A theater similarly conditioned would have had to display the "S. R. O." sign.

It would be strange, were other churches to neglect the lesson of this one's experience. The church has a message to deliver. For this purpose it maintains an organization of which the minister is the recognized spokesman. It makes an appeal aside from the direct word. It offers the atmosphere of hospitality. It freely relies upon the attractive power of music. In various forms, as in its stately exteriors, it supplies the lure of beauty. In colored window and in lofty nave it seeks to make the place of worship impressive. That any of these efforts is wasted would not be charged.

Adaptation of the moving picture to the purpose of instruction, and for proper amusement, is but to add another agency through which the senses may be stirred. The finest of sentiment, the most touching of narrative, may be conveyed by means of the screen. Every phase of life may be set forth; the desired lesson in morals easily imparted. It would be easy by means of a picture to create precisely the atmosphere attuned to reception of the word from the pulpit. The chance to see a picture doubtless would draw many to the place of worship, there to have the benefit not of this display alone, but of whatever good there is sought to be imparted by the whole scheme of church service.

A famous Arctic explorer says he will devote his time hereafter to teaching the world that the Arctic fields are not barren, but contain vast stores of wealth. He holds that they are far from being the frigid and repellent wastes ordinarily supposed. The task he has set for himself is a hard one. Even if the polar regions are areas of delight, rich in milk and honey, the way thither is not without obstacles calculated to moderate the ambition of people so long holding a very different notion concerning them.

WARNING TO SPEEDERS.

Automobilists in the community adjacent to Los Angeles would do well to bear in mind that the speed laws are being enforced in that city. The process is rigorous, and no favorites are being played either by the police or the courts. In order to incur arrest and subsequent discomforts the driver does not have to go very fast. He has only to go an appreciable little bit faster than the law says is proper. If the legal rate is twenty miles, and he elects twenty-one as preferable the result may be a sentence to jail. Such a sentence is more to be dreaded than it would be under different conditions.

The only available prison space is hideously overcrowded. The speeder, possibly clean in person and in taste fastidious, has to take chances in the midst of filthy drunks, and vagrants sadly in need of delousing. There is no bed in which he would sleep. The safest resting place will be found to be the floor. The bedding to cover him there is wanting, or if it were obtained, would be unfit to touch. These conditions are shameful, it is true, but they are as they are. It seems rather severe to put speeders in such an environment, but drivers who avoid speeding easily may escape the experience. The public is sorry for the less insolent and milder type of offenders, but as to those who delight in making the streets and highways long stretches of peril, its pity remains at low ebb.

Things That Should Not Be Delayed

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Do not postpone love. Love and the expression of love, the kindly words and smiles and helpful deeds are like the manna that fell in the wilderness. They will not keep. It is a crop that must be gathered and spent every day.

Another thing about love is that it is not subject to the law of thrift. Do not economize in love. For the more you spend of it the more you have. Throw it away, give it away, splash it over, and tomorrow you will have more. But if you hoard it very probably tomorrow your hoard will be dried leaves.

Do not postpone play. Do a little of it today. One of the most efficient men I know, when asked when he took his vacation, replied, "Every day." Keeping everlastingly at it may bring success. It also brings paralysis and nervous prostration.

Be efficient. But there is such a thing as being too darned efficient. Do not postpone learning. No day should pass without mind sweat. And a month or a year without any hard study is sure to bring on one of the commonest and most fatal diseases—that is, fatal in the sense of being bothersome and reducing the power of one's personality. And that disease is mental flabbiness.

Do not postpone physical exercise. The time to take your exercises is when you do not want to. Do not postpone beauty. If you have passed a whole day and have never seen a thing that you admire or that thrills you with its loveliness, whether a leaf, a flower, a picture, or a face, that is a day lost.

No wonder. Do not devote every day to things that you understand. Around you is an infinite you cannot understand. Keep your mind up against it. For hence come the greatest elements into your nature.

Do not postpone happiness. Anybody can be happy without reference to his conditions as a rule, if he only has sense enough and is teachable enough.

The secret of happiness, or rather the secrets, are two—first, the power of adjustment to one's circumstances, and second, the possession of inner resources.

Nobody is a bigger fool than the man who is miserable every day with the idea that by means of it he is going to be happy after a while. Now is the time to be happy.

The best preparation for happiness is happiness. We do not realize the enormous resources of pleasure that are in the possession of each one of us. The normal functioning of every bodily power is accomplished with pleasure. The normal operation of our minds, whether in memory or imagination, is pleasurable. The normal condition of the soul that has reached any sort of basic truth about the universe is one of joy.

Besides this the whole world of nature about us is an inexhaustible reservoir of joy.

Be happy. And today's day. This does not mean be foolish, nor silly, nor reckless. It does not mean to intoxicate yourself, poison, or pervert yourself. All these are devil's short cuts. But without these and with merely the equipment of health and intelligence you can be happy. Do it now.

"A Little Work"—By George Du Maurier (1834-1896)

A little work, a little play
To keep us going—and so, good-day!
A little fun to match the sorrow
Of each day's growing—and so, good-morrow!
A little warmth, a little light
Of love's bestowing—and so, good-night!
A little trust that when we die
We reap our sowing! And so—good-bye!

CAN ANY GOOD THING COME OUT OF GERMANY?

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

Since the greatest tragedy of world history originated in Germany the world which suffered from Prussianism should take from Germany any good she is willing and able to give.

Knowing as an eye witness in Germany of the cruelties inflicted on man and beast in the name of military efficiency, I was dumfounded to read the inscription which appears on a tablet built into the facade of one of the principal buildings of the great Dresden abattoir. It is addressed to those who kill animals for food:

"This is a task of blood; discharge that task with mercy; let thy victim know no pain, but let the sudden blow bring death, such death as thou wouldst ask."

Amazing but splendid and since we are a nation of meat eaters, we can do no better than to adopt Dresden's motto and set it in the facades of every abattoir in the United States.

If every man had to kill his meat there would be precious little meat eaten. Our commercial methods short circuit the man who enjoys a good dinner of fresh foods from the pain that preceded his gustatory pleasures, just as the women who wear furs are short circuited from the agony of the poor little creatures who first bore the furs on their unoffending backs.

It is this short circuiting of the beneficiary from the agonies of his victim that causes so much unnecessary suffering to the dumb things which our conceit says God created for our benefit.

From the same source that gave me the quotation which inspired this article I have learned that France is of all countries the least merciful to the animals she kills for food. The Scandinavian countries use German methods in their slaughter pens and the animals are protected from all unnecessary pain. England is moving rapidly in the direction of humane slaughtering; but the United States, because of the vastness of the problem is lagging behind.

I feel as strongly as any one in regard to Germany's militarism, but unless we as a people unite in backing the American Humane association in slaughtering reform we shall have to share human people's condemnation of Germany.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

Theodore Repay applied for probation and failed to receive it. Instead he got a maximum sentence of ten years. Even this was treating him with mildness.

The case of Repay is cited as showing the possible abuse of a system that has much to commend it. He might have been probationed. Others perhaps as unworthy have been known to win it.

Repay's crime was gross, deliberate and brutal. Under guise of assisting aliens who had relatives abroad, he took their money ostensibly to send to the relatives, but kept it all himself. In instances life and death had been involved. One Russian succumbed to starvation because Repay kept the money that had been designed to bring him to this country. Application for probation must be regarded as an insolence in this case.

Probation is for the young in years and in crime. It is meant to keep the first offender from the experience of penitentiary life, because of the knowledge that from such experience he would be likely to emerge a hardened criminal. Probation has saved many a boy from ruin.

This process is not to be confounded with that of parole. The latter is extended to criminals actually serving sentences and is supposed to be based upon their fitness for liberty. The fitness is judged by the prison conduct of the applicant. Hence the smooth and habitual law-breaker knows the value of good behavior. The result is that the wave of crime acquires bulk and impetus from the activities of paroled men, loosed on "honor," a quality they lack wholly.

Members of the I. W. W. now on trial and acting as their own lawyers, get much joy from heckling talesmen. It seems to be their policy to bar from the jury any person addicted to clean linen or showing signs of prosperity. Recently a mature talesman whose hands showed no mark of toil was accused by the acting lawyer of cutting coupons. He admitted it.

"How did you get your money?" he was asked with fine sarcasm. "I was a structural iron worker for fifteen years," was the answer, "and worked up in my trade."

Was he accepted by the I. W. W.? He was not.

There still is considerable talk concerning the New York woman who attended a social gathering the other night and was robbed of jewels worth half a million.

Consensus of opinion seems, to be that she showed bad judgment in selection of associates, however fine her discretion in decorating her person with a jewelry store.

Somebody at Vancouver, B. C., has issued a book proclaimed to have been dictated by the spirit of Kitchener of Katmon. In it the soldier is made to tell of hobnobbing with Mary Queen of Scots, Helen of Troy, and others, once ladies of distinction. Pretty mean advantage to take of a dead man.

Much undue fuss was made about the hanging of a woman in England. There is a law in that country forbidding and punishing the crime of murder. Unlike a somewhat similar law in this country, the one over there is enforced.

In the United States the murderer is treated with such consideration that even if the formality of a trial is carried out, it affords the defendant nothing worse than the chance to be made a heroine, finally to be turned loose to the accompaniment of cheers.

The English fashion does have a certain grimness about it, but it is the better way, and as a preventive of murder, exceedingly effective.

The distribution of pictures has been done almost exclusively in New York, this being true of pictures made on this coast, as the great majority of pictures are. A move to change the distribution center to Los Angeles has begun. It is wholly logical. The change shows a broadening of the comparatively new theory that there really is no occasion for permitting the metropolis to be the center of everything.

Four women in New York fought for the affections of one man. Whether the highly complimented male accepted the one who emerged victorious is not told in the dispatches.

Women have been known to fight for a man, but seldom do they go at the business tooth and nail, choosing rather, the methods of diplomacy.

The late Ricardo Magón was an anarchist for fair, and seems to have bequeathed his sentiments uncolored and undiminished to his widow. When the government of Mexico offered to pay funeral expenses she spurned the money. When a similar tender came from a band of anarchists, the obsequies progressed with due pomp.

Magón was mentioned at the time of his death as a rare soul. Perhaps he was. Perhaps it is a fortunate thing for the race that the type is so rare.

James Hamilton Lewis, once congressman from Washington, later senator from Illinois, proprietor of pink and unrivaled whiskies, is competent to affirm much that is not so. His desire to affirm keeps the whiskies bobbing merrily. He says that all of Europe hates the United States. He sees a national peril in the resentments of Japan and China, of Turkey and Russia.

Oh-well, he gets space rates for his dope, which is explanation enough.

WATCHING THE PARADE

BY JOHN PILGRIM

Last summer I met a large, fat, bright-eyed man named Hitchcock. I don't remember now where I met him. At some party, somewhere, somehow. A friend introduced him, but I do not know what friend. I had forgotten the man completely. I had even forgotten that I ever met him. To be right clear about it I do not even now recall that I ever met him anywhere. At any rate he walked up to me on the street one day.

"Well, well, John Pilgrim," said he. "And how are our good friends the Igloos? I haven't seen them since that night we met. Good party, wasn't it?"

He chuckled. Being a poor fellow I chuckled too instead of clouting him with my brief bag. He handed me a good cigar and I took it. Next day he met me again and handed me another good cigar and I took it. Next day he met me again and I beat him to it. I handed him a good cigar which I had bought for that purpose. I did not propose to be without a defense. Somehow, on other, a sort of a commuters' intimacy grew up between us. He told stories well and played a fair hand of bridge.

"There's a bully chance in the market just now," he said, carelessly. "You know Tim with Streetham and Fletcher, the brokers of Bull street. Better walk down with me and get in." "But I didn't!" And it was a bully chance. And he told me of other good chances and I refused to get in and they were good chances. I cannot blame myself with having lost a penny. I never trusted the man or liked him. If I were to get into the market, I told myself, I'd at least have sense enough to operate through my banker. He would give me guidance that I might not get through Hitchcock.

So far so good. I am not a loser. But Hitchcock had managed to be seen with me rather often, and he had met a good many friends of mine in that loose way in which commuters get acquainted. They took it for granted because Hitchcock seemed to know me so well. He used to talk of my conservatism in an admiring sort of way—giving the impression that his knowledge and my conservatism made a money making team. So that today these good friends began to ask me:

"What do you know about this Hitchcock, anyhow?" I knew nothing about him, of course. Nor does any one else, except that he was a cheap tout and that the firm he worked for was a crooked bucketshop.

But the fact that I know nothing about him is no consolation to the friends who met him through me—and lost money through him.

TIMBERLAND IS RAPIDLY BEING CONSUMED

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 10.—President Harding has said that the protection and perpetuation of our forests are vital to our continued industrial welfare and national strength, and to our individual health, comfort and prosperity. This is just as true of California as it is of Maine, and there is no other problem which today deserves more serious consideration by the citizens of this state.

Fifteen per cent of the soil of California is, according to the United States Forest Service, timbered or cut-over land in private ownership. More than two million acres, an area equal in size to Trinity county, have already been stripped of merchantable timber and this acreage of cut-over land is being increased at the rate of 60,000 acres a year. California's forests are valued at one and a half billion dollars and the investment in logging equipment and sawmills is estimated to be at least fifty million dollars.

In addition to the large acreage of logged-over lands there are also some two million acres of brush fields in the state, valuable from the standpoint of watershed protection, grazing and the development of a future timber supply. On five-sixths of this area a new forest is already in the making; 300,000 acres are barren waste which will have to be planted. All these brush lands were at one time covered with forests and had they not been denuded by lumbering and repeated fires would, it is estimated, today bear a stand of 36 billion feet of timber, an amount almost equal to the total annual cut of the United States.

Few people appreciate the fact that our forests are one of California's chief sources of wealth. They yield an annual return of from 50 to 60 million dollars worth of timber; they give employment to thousands of workmen; they protect the watersheds upon which cities and ranches are dependent for their domestic and irrigation water supply; they furnish forage for thousands of cattle and sheep; they are the natural home of our fast-disappearing wild life; they are the great vacation playgrounds for more than two millions of our citizens; in short, they are inseparably linked in countless ways with prosperity and happiness.

But how can we perpetuate our forest resources? First, by a wise use of our remaining timber supply through elimination of preventable destructive logging methods, closer utilization of timber products, and by the practice of rational, business like methods of forestry. Second, by a system of adequate fire protection on both timbered and cut-over lands wherein private individuals, the state and federal governments join hands in a common cause. These things should be done if California is not to follow in the wake of such states as Michigan and Minnesota, now almost swept clean of their timber.

California's forestry problem is a vital one, and one which the state administration must squarely face. To date, through the co-operation of state and federal forestry authorities and private lumbering and business interests, considerable progress has been made, especially in the protection of timberlands from fire. But much still remains to be done along this and many other lines if our forests are to be preserved through wise use for all time. The friends of forestry and all citizens with the interests of the state at heart, will demand that no backward step be taken in the conservation of this great natural resource of California, by providing the funds to protect the forest cover from ruinous fires.

COAL SHORTAGE DRIVES POOR OF NEW YORK TO FUEL ADMINISTRATION'S 49 RELIEF STATIONS

Winter's first real cold weather sent thousands of tenement dwellers in New York city to the emergency coal stations thrown open by the state fuel administration. City, county and state officials combined to safeguard the supply for those who were unable to buy in large quantities or to store more than a small amount. The coal was sold in lots of 50, 100 and 200 pounds, at 70 cents a hundred weight, the buyers immediately carrying or wheeling away the precious fuel.

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS

STEAM TENTS

The missionary meeting was in session.

The business of the afternoon had given way to the pleasant tinkle of tea cups and the exchange of experiences with measles, and pickling, and cake baking, and croup—not to mention the training of infants in the way they should go.

For these mothers, old and young, were all very serious and intent upon making of their families citizens who were 100 per cent blooded.

"I had the worst time with little Johnny the last time he had croup," said Angie Pell, who lived on a farm. "He has it quite often. I'm just getting used to it now, and when I hear that terrifying croupy cough in the night I don't feel HALF as petrified as I did at first. The doctor says it is almost always more alarming to look at than it actually is."

"True croup is certainly alarming. But sometimes my children are so frightened when they cough a little in the night that I simply have to turn the light on and tell them a story. They forget about having croup and go to sleep. I know they are asleep, I suppose you call that false croup?" said Maria Stone.

"I'd call it satisfactory croup, at any rate," said Angie, taking another cup of tea. "I tried to make a croup tent, just like I had been reading about, and I wish you could have seen my poor Johnny. The kettle steamed all right. All was very steamy. So much so that the moisture dripped down on the cot, and half of the steam seemed to be lost in the air. It never happened before."

"Did you have a blanket on top of the sheet to absorb the moisture?" gently questioned the minister's wife.

"Why, I forget. It didn't seem right, somehow. But Johnny got over it all right," Angie said, philosophically.

"My experience with croup tents has been that almost any makeshift does if one only gets it together properly. An umbrella is as good as anything," said the minister's wife.

"But I wouldn't DARE put up an umbrella in the house. It causes bad luck," said Maria Stone, fearfully.

No one seemed to hear her.

"If you have a screen you can place it at the head of the bed and have it come around on each side. Stretch a cord across from one wing of the screen to the other. Clothesline, rope, or a dressing gown cord, anything will do, if it is strong enough," said the minister's wife. "Over this hastily fashioned tent, I told an old blanket, covering it with a sheet and pinning the corners around the corner of the screen. This tent usually amuses and interests the child, and I find that in croup the child is as frightened as the parents."

"We have an electric heater which fastens to the light beside the bed, so there is no worry about an alcohol flame under the kettle. Before we had a real croup kettle, which, by the way, I had the tin-smith make for a few cents, I used a tin teapot in an emergency, and directed the steam under the tent quite easily. Of course the heater had to be raised to the bed level on a chair or the steam would have been lost."

"There's nothing like knowing what to do when your child has croup," said poor old Letty Long, who had neither chick nor child. And that very night she "rigged" up a croup tent in her lonely bedroom, just to be sure that she knew HOW it should be done.

ORDER, AS PART OF ANY CURE

There was illness in the Powers family.

The neighbors knew it before they saw the doctor's gray car at the door of the big green house, because the Powerses always demonstrated calamity.

When Mrs. Powers telephoned her butcher she said, "And I want some round steak for beef tea. Yes! Willie is sick again. It never rains but it pours. I have Maria in bed still, you know, with nerves."

Whereupon Maria called querulously from the downstairs bedroom, "It isn't 'nerves.' I was up for an hour yesterday."

One glance at Maria's bedroom would have explained to a professional nurse why Maria HAD "nerves," conceding such to be the case.

The room was a bedlam. There was dust upon everything and an untidy litter of papers, and strings, hastily torn off drug store and florist's parcels.

In vases were fresh flowers and half wilted flowers. The air, sweet with roses and carnations, was stuffy and much too warm in the dusty sunshine that gleamed in through the windows. The shades were partly raised on one window and entirely on another. The effect was sketchy.

In the midst of it all poor Maria, a thin pale girl of eighteen or so, lay in a bed that was hastily and untidily made. Magazines and books, bits of bright colored sewing and a box of paints that had upset on the bed, were scattered in the confusion that never looks more disturbing than in a sick room.

Margaret Spencer, one of the village spinsters, running in to return a book and ask after Maria's health, remained to offer her services as sick room assistant.

She lived in one of those prim homes where the geraniums are watered at exactly the same moment every morning, where the routine work moves as if by clockwork, where always there are extra sheets smelling of dried lavender in the linen cupboard to lend the neighbors when they "run short" in cases of illness.

So while Mrs. Powers was taking the neighborhood into her confidence and making a poultice for Willie's chest, Margaret Spencer brought order out of chaos in the sunshiny bedroom downstairs.

"If you feel well enough to sit up in a chair, Maria, I could make your bed," she offered tentatively. But Maria shook a weary head.

"I don't care a bit about the bed," she said, "but if you would be a good Samaritan and bring me water to clean my teeth and a sponge and some water and soap, I could wash my face and hands, and smooth my hair. I feel a sight. And poor mother's so upset over Willie that I hate to trouble her."

Margaret rolled up her sleeves, found an extra blanket, and gave Maria a bed bath. Swiftly she sponged the girl's tired body with warm water. She followed it with brisk friction with a warm bath towel, then with a powder rub and a fresh linen gown.

Then she brushed the girl's hair, and lifted her into a chair, for Maria was a light as a feather. While Maria was sitting in the chair, Margaret whisked the mattress over, remade the bed, threw open the windows and began to gather up books and magazines, papers and glasses, spoons and discarded garments, remnants of trays, and waste paper. She straightened the window shades, dusted the room and as she put Maria back to bed was rewarded with the words, "I feel a million times better, Margaret dear, and the room looks positively attractive and restful."

Under the Stars

By JOHN BRECK

Out in the peaceful night, where the only sounds are the harsh plaint of the dying leaves and the reassuring murmur of a little stream, grown fat and hearty with the autumn rains, one's thoughts reach out toward the stars, refract as strangely when they touch familiar customs and belief as do the distant rays when they enter our familiar atmosphere. One remembers the lovely story of creation, when God said, "Let there be light; and there was light. And God saw the light, that it was good; and God divided the light from the darkness." But sunset does not herald the darkness of that time when "earth was without form, and void," not while you see the hilltops resting their tall heads against the sky, and the trees uplifting their prayerful branches to it. That amorphous blackness belongs to the depths of earth, where no life stirs—and between the four walls of men; for later God made the lesser lights "to rule the night also." And all creation was satisfied with the arrangement; seeing they knew no better.

But along came man, created in God's own likeness, according to the Scriptures and took to working miracles of his own. He said, "Let there be more light." And there was—and is—from thousands of little lights he has stolen from the sun at second hand. "But just as they illuminate only a little space in the night about him, so his intelligence reaches only a little way into the universal mystery. He has decided that his light is good—but he forgets that one may have too much of a good thing."

For not only is man's light less than the burning brilliance of the sun—it is not the same. Something vital is missing from it. Sunlight enables the plants to store the carbonhydrates by which they grow—or helps tubercular patients to lay on the fat which helps them to resist the disease. Artificial light can stimulate plant growth, but is it solid building? Is it not just consuming the energy already taken from the sun? Does it over-stimulate us? Is it this most brilliant product of our civilization which makes for shrill voices, hunger for sensation, jazz music, and all its other neurotic defects? They vanish when "we go back to nature." Is it because we take our days in the sun and our nights beneath the stars in the same doses as the Lord's first prescription called for? There we discover that the lesser lights still "rule the night" with a cool blue restfulness as different from our false daylight as water is from flame.

Will the time ever come when artificial light will be proscribed like other "injurious stimulants" allowed in excess only by a doctor's prescription? Even the most law-abiding might find temptation strong with a good book or a pat flush at hand—but illicit indulgence in the product of "sunlight stills" would be the hardest thing in the world to keep dark.

GLENDALE GIRLS CALLED FOR BIG SHRINE SHOW

Rehearsal Saturday of All Who Wish to Take Part in Spectacle

If you are a girl somewhere between the ages of 16 and 24, and you are longing for excitement and romance, join the big Shrine show, a 3-act musical comedy entitled "Smile Again."

If you can sing, and can dance, so much the better. However, we have a little lady who has perhaps trained more big dancing acts for vaudeville and musical comedy than anyone on the coast—Virgie Ellis—and under her instruction you will soon learn to dance as well as any professional. And girls, the costumes! They are exquisite. In the first act, alone there are five changes—everyone a dream in itself! They were designed by none other than Rosa Rehn, who designs all the costumes for Oliver Morosco as well as all the largest musical productions. You don't have to furnish a thing girls—except your talent and beauty. Of course you must agree to give all your time available to rehearsal—because we've got to put it over. No New York production will be able to boast of anything more spectacular!

The music was all written just for this show—all new music you have never heard before.

If you have an exceptional voice or you are a wonderful dancer—at least your friends think so—there are some good parts in the cast open and if you are suited to one of these parts you have the opportunity of displaying your special talent.

If you are interested report on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock, at the Broadway Inn, corner of Broadway and Glendale avenue.

A story told on the late Dean Stanley refers to his thorough inability in the pulpit. Preaching one morning at Westminster Abbey he was pleased to notice the perfect attention of his congregation. At the close of the service he remarked to his wife upon their steadfast attention on his words. "They never seemed to take their eyes off me," he told her, with obvious gratification.

"No wonder, my dear," said Lady Agatha, "seeing you had one of your gloves on your head all the time you were preaching."

Placing his gloves in his hat on leaving home, the dean had removed his hat in the vestry upon being gowned and had walked reverently to the pulpit unaware that he was carefully balancing one glove on his head.

LIMITATIONS OF MODERN HEROISM

There is no chance to be a hero now. With medals on your breast and your pale brow All wreathed with laurel like a sirlion steak In the meatmarket window. You can make A fortune buying stocks but you can't be An orator like Patrick Henry. He Could make the world sit up and look at him. And Captain Kidd was great and Bandit Jim Killed Indians by scores but you and me, Why, millionaires is all that we can be.

In olden days we could have been a knight With armor on and going forth to fight For some fair maid, but now we only ride In autos with the lady fair inside. And maybe run into a train and get The auto broke and all of us in debt For breaking the machine. Or maybe we Can be a football player or can be A pitcher in the big league team but Oh, We cannot do the deeds of long ago.

Oh for the days of old when knights were brave And any one would give his life to save A flower from a lady's hair, or fight A hundred robbers in a single night. And kill them all and drown them in the moat. Perhaps they could not get a single vote Today if they should be a candidate For mayor. But it does not make you great To get the votes unless you are as bold And honest as the knights in days of old.

The Once Over

THE REAL FACTS ABOUT THE STRAITS CONTROVERSY

(Special Correspondent at the Lausanne Conference.)

Lausanne—I have arrived O. K. and well and am glad to be able to clear up many points which have been confusing American newspaper readers. I can state definitely that no matter which side wins in this argument it is apt to be harder to get in or out of the Black Sea than it used to be. This will be a terrible blow to American citizens. Not that many of them want to get into the Black Sea. As a matter of fact, most of them have rarely, if ever, taken a notion to visit it. They feel, however, that if they wish to run over some afternoon for a Black Sea beach party and marshall roast, they shouldn't be interfered with. It's a matter of personal liberty.

With so many seas in all parts of the world it would seem there would be enough to go around and even have a few left over, but such isn't the case. There is so much fighting going on over the Black Sea just now I am beginning to think there is something in it besides plain water.

I have looked it up on the map and it isn't much of a sea. It is only about the size of a quarter and not nearly as good looking as lots of seas I have seen. There are lots of better seas you may see in the United States to which nobody pays any attention.

The only thing about the Black Sea different from most seas in that there is a catch to it. It is very poorly equipped in the matter of entrances and exits. In fact, you came in. This makes it a one-way sea. And even when you're out you have a lot of obstacles to go through, such as the Bosphorus, the Sea of Marmora, and the Dardanelles, and a lot of things called straits, before you get out where there is plenty of elbow room.

PREDATORY FOLK MEET DISASTER

PORTLAND, Oregon, Jan. 11.—The year 1922 was an unhealthy one for predatory animals in Oregon. It has been estimated by the federal biological survey here that 40,000 predatory animals were destroyed by hunters, poison bait, and traps during the year.

Livestock valued at $40,000,000, owned by farmers in this state are the unconscious beneficiaries of the efforts of 266 government hunters who are using every expert method to exterminate coyotes, bobcats, grey wolves, mountain lions, and bears.

The past year marked considerable increase in the slaughter over 1921. The biological survey accounted for the deaths of over 27,000 coyotes, 6822 bobcats, 687 large grey wolves, more than 150 mountain lions or cougar, and 114 bears.

Still there must be something attractive about it, or the allies and the Turks and Russians wouldn't be fighting so much over it. The allies, I am reliably informed, are for opening it up. They want the straits free for all visiting Elks and everybody, while the Turks and Russians feel they should be fixed so nobody could get in or out without a permit, police card, and fire-line badge.

What the Turks intend doing with them when they get them all sealed up is a mystery. Maybe they are only planning a water carnival or swimming meet and wish to keep out the rough element. This is fair enough. The allies, particularly the British, are dead against this admission by card only stuff, however.

Lord Curzon, who is doing the talking for England, is strong for opening up the straits and the Black Sea, and developing them so they'll be just as attractive as any of the best summer resorts. In fact, he has offered to build a boardwalk and midway with scenic arcades and shooting galleries and everything all along the waterfront. Ambassador Child, representing the United States, favors this, and thinks the straits could be made as attractive as Atlantic City or Niagara Falls in time.

But there is no understanding a Turk's mind, if any. Just now it looks like a draw. Lord Curzon has put his plans on the table and told the Turks to take them or leave them. The Turks I have interviewed, such as Ismet Pacha and Wasmeh Hejaz and Tiliwomeet-again Razmatraz, say they will never yield. I will write more later as events take shape, but it looks to me as if nobody could count on getting into or out of the Black Sea from now on except Houdini. (Note to cable editor: Give my regards to Dummer and tell him not to worry, as I will write him about the harem in a personal letter.)
